

Our Little Pets Need Cascarets

When children quarrel and fight, see if the little tongues are white. Hurry! Clean the clogged-up places. Bring back smiles to little faces. Children think Cascarets are dandy. They are mild cathartic candy. Sell for a dime—"work" every time.

MOTHERS! You need never worry after giving your cross, bilious, or constipated child a Cascaret. This harmless, easily cathartic thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, bowels and all the toxins, sour fermentations and poisons. By morning the little dears are happy and playful again. Full directions on each 10 cent box.

That Little Old Boy

Maybe you've got one. Anyhow, they are all alike. None quite so cute as yours, though! Anyway, you know him—little, dirty, round, with blue overalls. That's the boy! "Well, what's my little man doing all day?" "O, est' a'round amongst the guinea nest!" "Est a' knockin' around amongst the guinea nest!" Doesn't that sound good and country, and the right kind of a boy-like? And isn't it worth a million to have that little old boy to tell you the big things he has done—when you come home at night?

And now the Bank? Well, the Bank—this Bank can help you do things for that boy that will safeguard him from all the hardships, worries and embarrassment that has, maybe, been yours to know.

LIQUIDATION OF HIGH CREDITS NECESSARY

PROGRAM MUST PROVIDE FOR THIS

Chairman of Federal Trade Commission Sounds Warning.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 21.—A reconstruction program not looking toward the payment of liquidation of America's huge credits to the allied nations will mark the United States for utter ruin.

This warning was sounded here today by Wm. B. Colver, chairman of the federal trade commission, in an address before the tenth annual convention of the American Specialty Manufacturers' association.

Commissioner Colver pointed out that if America had debts in foreign countries, it would be possible to temporarily maintain a balance of trade and enable the country to export food and raw materials in excess of the value of our imports.

But, Mr. Colver continued, a nation cannot be a creditor nation and an exporting nation without taking goods in exchange for its exports and eventually liquidating its credit balances through surplus imports, except that it build up abroad a constantly increasing credit balance.

Therefore in exchange for the exportation of these things of which we have the greatest surplus and can produce most cheaply, America must take in exchange from every quarter of the globe the importations of those things which we most desire and cannot advantageously produce.

Such a provision must be specifically contained in our reconstruction program, he said.

Transactions Profitable.
This, with a fair field in the world's markets for competitive goods, Mr. Colver continued, would make each transaction profitable to both the buyer and seller. It would permit the gradual liquidation of such part of the money debt that the world owes the United States as may not be usefully employed as international credit and working capital for the facilitation of America's world commerce.

"To leave the present credit balances of the United States unliquidated," Mr. Colver said, "and to add to their huge total by the exportation of goods over imports would be to build up a world-wide commercial empire."

Germany's Intention.
"Commercial imperialism was what Germany sought, and upon this foundation was built the war machine of Germany. The Pan-Germanic program for world-wide economic and financial domination was Germany's death warrant. Being unable to feed the monster by peaceful trade expansion, she was compelled to invoke war."

A reconstruction program for the United States looking to the building up on top of the credit balances, unending mountains of international credits will tend, not only to make the United States the most hated nation in the world, but to mark her for destruction. It means commercial imperialism."

Best Way to Wash the Hair

We find you can bring out the beauty of your hair to its very best advantage by washing it with Canthrox. It makes a very simple, inexpensive shampoo, which cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly of all the dandruff, dirt and excess oil, leaving a wonderfully clean, wholesome feeling. After its use you will find that the hair dries quickly and evenly, is never streaked in appearance and is always bright, soft and fluffy; so fluffy, in fact, that it looks more abundant than it is, and so soft that arranging it becomes a pleasure. Just use a teaspoonful of Canthrox, which you can get from any good drugstore, dissolve it in a cup of hot water; this makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. EXCHANGE OF VIEWS BRINGS FORTH FRUIT

DIFFERENCES IN PEACE PLAN CLEARED UP.

President Expected to Lay Before Congress Policies of United States.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Optimism regarding the coming peace conference was spreading in official circles here today. The preliminary exchanges between the leading powers in progress ever since the German appeal for an armistice was made, are rapidly bringing fruit. It is believed here that when the peace conference actually assembles in Versailles, absolute harmony will be assured.

There has been a frank and open exchange of views on controversial points, it is understood here and no really serious difference of opinion has developed. The issues that must be settled, of course, is the league of nations, how its powers shall be divided, what shall be the basis of representation and whether the governing body will be in the nature of a supreme court of the world. Collateral problems, such as what the "freedom of the seas" actually means, and how the world map shall be remodeled along territorial lines, all will settle themselves as soon as the league plan can be framed satisfactory to the allied powers.

Adjust Differences.
Some differences of opinion concerning plans have been cleared up as the result of the exchange of views between Washington and the allied capitals. It now is expected that President Wilson, on his arrival in France, will present a concrete proposition on which unanimity among the allies will be secured. The defense of the allied powers will accept any plan that has the advocacy and support of the United States. That already is a foregone conclusion. Probably nowhere else is it so fully realized that Germany's only hope of regaining her place as a nation among nations depends on her securing the active aid of the United States than in Germany proper. Her new leaders realize that isolation must be her portion unless the United States allows her credits and opportunity to enter the markets of the western hemisphere. They know that they must accept a peace treaty and it is considered certain here in Washington that the delegates from the enemy countries will gladly follow the lead of President Wilson around the peace table.

Short Work.
Therefore, if a basis of agreement is present among the allies, when the Versailles conference opens, the work of that body will be cut short. With practical agreement on peace secured, the work of reducing the terms to paper will be comparatively short. And the president has been assured that his presence at the conference will make for speed. It is violating no secret to say that the framing of the peace treaty are anxious for speed. They realize that wartime conditions have passed and that the sooner the world is put on a basis of peace, the better it will be for all concerned. Assurances have reached Washington that Premier Clemenceau and Lloyd-George will advance speedily to the very outset of the conference. It is believed here that the conference will take up at the outset, the big outstanding problems that touch on world decisions and in which every nation is concerned. That will allow President Wilson to make his views plain and will permit the "big four"—Wilson, Clemenceau, Lloyd-George and Orlando—to demonstrate their agreement early enough in the session to attract to their support nations that under other circumstances might adopt a "middle of the road" policy. After that all will be plain sailing, and it would be very easy for the president to return home certain that the entire program would be put through.

Peace Delegation.
An early announcement of the make-up of the peace delegation is looked for here. The agitation among members of the senate to secure representation on the body is growing very strong. Whether it will impress President Wilson sufficiently, however, to change his slate so as to provide for one or two senatorial delegates, is known only to himself. Most officials here do not believe that it will. They declare that up to the present time, the senate has hardly been what would be called helpful to the executive in handling the problems of the war and that he can be depended on to continue the policy that has brought results and apparently has been very pleasing to the people of the United States.

President's Address.
When the president addresses congress one week from next Tuesday, on the eve of his departure for France, he is expected to make it clear that the new policies of the United States must be shaped with a regard for the permanent welfare of the nation rather than along partisan lines. By inference at least, he is expected sharply to criticize certain members of his own party, and of the republicans for "over-zealousness" in trying to force an immediate surrender by the executive of the extraordinary wartime powers conferred upon him.

Senate Representation.
Incidentally, touching on the question of senate representation on the American peace commission, a high administration official said today: "The senate will ratify any treaty agreed upon by the United States and its allies, whether there are senators on this commission or not. This war affected the entire world and the treaty that ends it must insure permanent peace to the world. That is what the President goes to France to secure and when one of the facts can be revealed, the nation will realize still more strongly how much."

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN

If Germany Had Won, Occupation of London and Paris Would Have Been Demanded.

London, Nov. 21.—(British Wireless Press).—"We should have demanded the occupation of London and Paris. This would have dictated peace at Buckingham palace, if Germany had won the war," says a letter to the West-Zeitung, written by the late Albert Ballin, former head of the Hamburg-American line. Herr Ballin went on to say that Germany would have annexed the whole European continent from the Ural mountains to the Bay of Biscay.

TURMOIL BREWING

Near Clash Between Mexicans and Americans Over Arrest of Mexican.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 21.—Turmoil is still brewing on the Mexican side of the border, as the result of a near-clash between Mexican and American troops, when immigration inspector Eusebio Garcia was wanted on the American side and Riggs handcuffed him and stood off Mexicans with a pistol while American guardsmen dragged the prisoner on to undisputed American soil.

No shots were fired, the intervention of the Mexican consul, Andres Garcia, with the aid of American officials, preventing the anger of the crowd turning into actual fighting. The trouble arose over the fact that the exact imaginary boundary line on the international bridge, is a matter of dispute.

REVISION OF ESTIMATES

Secretary Daniels and Naval Committee Cut Down Proposed Expenditures.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Co-operation between Secretary Daniels and the house naval affairs committee in cutting down the $2,411,000,000 in estimates submitted by the navy department for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1919, is regarded as assured as a result of the secretary's conference with the committee.

When the committee resumed its hearings today on the naval appropriation bill, it was stated by several members that they believed that a revision of the estimates would be amicably effected without Secretary Daniels' three-year war shipbuilding program being interfered with.

The secretary's explanation that the estimates were prepared last September, when the country was on a war basis, and when in official quarters, war was not expected to end before next year, was regarded as satisfactory by Representative Butler, of Pennsylvania, and other republican members of the committee, who are strongly in favor of peace economies, insofar as they are practicable.

"My sole desire is to live in peace and amity with all persons according to the rules laid down by President Wilson, and we also have appealed to President Wilson for food. We want to see law and order established throughout the world and we believe President Wilson will be able to do so."
